PDCA is a nonprofit association for professional painting contractors who:

- Are licensed.
- Are insured.
- Adhere to the highest Industry Standards.
- Are held to a superior Code of Ethics.
- Regularly receive training in safety, best practices and customer satisfaction.
- Collaborate with other top-tier industry professionals to raise the bar in the industry and provide a higher quality service for their customers and employees.

THE HIGHEST INDUSTRY STANDARDS

PDCA's member companies uphold the PDCA Industry Standards which provide criteria for evaluating services to ensure all work is free from defects, deficiencies and significant variations of coating applications.

The Standards discuss a range of issues that commonly become the subject of misunderstandings, or in extreme cases, contract disputes and provide guidance for both the contractor and the layman concerning how such differences can best be avoided.

A SUPERIOR CODE OF ETHICS

PDCA's member companies promise to:

- Provide painting and decorating services in a professional business-like manner with both craftsmanship and up-to-date techniques.
- Protect, preserve and decorate homes, edifices, facilities and all other public and private property with the most progressive and efficient means and materials.
- Maintain regulatory, insurance and licensing requirements in the areas they conduct business.
- Faithfully fulfill all contracts.
- Adhere to federal, state, and local laws and administrative regulations regarding the use and disposal of paints, coatings, and related materials.
